Some glimpses of Webinar....

How browser fingerprints are used and misused

- The first purpose of a browser fingerprint is to confirm a user's identity without any effort on their part. For example, if a bank can tell from your browser fingerprint that it's you carrying out a transaction, they don't need to bother sending a security code to your phone
- The second purpose is to show targeted ads. Read a guide on one website about choosing an iron, then go to another website that uses the same ad network and the network will show you ads for irons.
- That said, many websites with built-in components from various ad networks and analytics services collect and analyze your fingerprints.
